

Making Connections (Text to Text)

LEVEL 1

These stories are similar because they both have characters in them that draw.

Making Connections (Text to Text)

LEVEL 2

These stories are similar because they both have characters in them that are not happy about the way they draw.

Making Connections (Text to Text)

LEVEL 3

These stories share many similarities. Both stories have characters in them that are not happy about the way they draw. As a result, they get discouraged to draw. It is not until someone pays attention to their drawings that they get motivated to draw again. For example, in the story "The Dot," Vashti thought that she couldn't draw and quickly gave up. However, once her art teacher displayed her drawings in the gallery Vashti became motivated to continue drawing. In the story, "Ish," Ramon was discouraged to draw because his older brother kept laughing at his drawings. It wasn't until his little sister displayed his drawings in her bedroom that motivated him to continue drawing.

Making Connections (Text to Text)

LEVEL 4

These stories share many similarities. Both stories have characters in them that are not happy about the way they draw. As a result, they get discouraged to draw. It is not until someone pays attention to their drawings that they get motivated to draw again. For example, in the story "The Dot," Vashti thought that she couldn't draw and quickly gave up. However, once her art teacher displayed her drawings in the gallery Vashti became motivated to continue drawing. In the story, "Ish," Ramon was discouraged to draw because his older brother kept laughing at his drawings. It wasn't until his little sister displayed his drawings in her bedroom that motivated him to continue drawing. Finally, both stories share the same Big Idea which is to be brave and confident about expressing ourselves and to never give up.